1. Appen

Appen has become an even more prominent leader in the search engine evaluation industry, so it's definitely an excellent time to try to join the company as an evaluator. Its current and former contractors report earnings of about $13-$14 per hour

2. Lionbridge

The Internet Search Evaluator position is Lionbridge's Search Engine Evaluator job. As an Internet Search Evaluator or Web Assessor, you'll be an independent contractor for Lionbridge. Current and former contractors report an average of almost $14 per hour for both positions.

3. Raterlabs

RaterLabs comes from Appen and is somewhat of the child between the merger between Leapforce and Appen. Much of the tasks and process for applying are very similar. You must be at least 18 years old to join the company.Of course, you'll also need a high-speed internet connection, a reliable computer with updated software, and excellent research skills.

4. Google

Yes, Google itself hires Ads Quality Raters to check its algorithms from time to time.If you want a chance to work with the king of search engines itself, then here's your chance, although the jobs come few and far between and are very difficult to get with so many applicants (who wouldn't want to work with Google?).Google's rating jobs work similarly as other on this list.

5. iSoftStone

iSoftStone has Search Engine Evaluator positions available in different parts of the world at different times, so you may need to keep checking its careers page to find an open position in your country. The reported pay rate for iSoftStone's Search Engine Evaluator position is $12-$13 per hour

6. ZeroChaos

ZeroChaos employees report making at least $15 per hour, making this the highest reported salary for Search Engine Evaluators. It also pays its employees weekly, rather than monthly, like other companies. However, it can also affect the flexibility many want when they become Search Engine Evaluators.Workers report that they are required to work between 10 and 29 hours per week and you have to complete your assignments by a specific deadline.

7. Ask Wonder

If you like researching and answering questions, you can apply to be an analyst with Wonder and work from home. You can expect their pay to be around $1000 per month.

8. 10EQS

The company hires independent contractors as Experts to research and answer questions in their areas of expertise. The pay varies.