

1. ProBlogger

ProBlogger is one of the best platforms for bloggers. You can find great writing and editing opportunities on this website.

2. MediaBistro

If you want online editing projects or want to polish your skills, this website is a good option to work with. Most job opportunities on this site are media-based.

3. ACES: The Society for Editing

For $75 annual membership to this organization for editors across industries including access to a job bank of high-quality jobs and projects as well as a listing in the ACES Editors for Hire directory.

4. Cambridge Proofreading Worldwide

Editors who work with this company can expect to work on dissertations, research proposals, admissions papers, resume.

5. Enago

The company has edited over 600,000 manuscripts and helped over 2 million authors. Enago hires for work-from-anywhere editors to work on topics related to science, chemistry, engineering, physics, and more.

6. Lecturio

Lecturio is an e-learning platform geared toward students and institutions in the medical field. It provides online education services that aim to supplement medical learning and teaching, with curricula covering topics for pre-med and medical students.

7. Scribbr

The company also offers content assistance, such as writing samples, tips and tricks, style guides, etc. Academic editors can find work-from-anywhere jobs with Scribbr.

8. Wordvice

Wordvice offers research and academic editing services, journal manuscript editing services, admission and scholarship essay editing for undergraduate and graduate institutions, and business proofreading and editing.

9. Scribendi

Scribendi is a Canada-based online proofreading and editing firm. It provides on-demand services “24 hours a day across all time zones,” and it has over 200 highly qualified and experienced editors skilled in medical, resume, business communication, ESL, and scientific editing.